

Using Microsoft Sway in Learning and Teaching

Kathleen Savage
senior teaching fellow

Microsoft Sway

Sway is a new app from Microsoft Office that is available to us at Strathclyde. It has a number of uses in creating and sharing reports, stories, presentations, photo albums and more, and in this micro-CPD we will focus on using it in learning and teaching.

In collaboration with Evelyn Treaty from Information Services, a video was made to share how Sway can be used to support learning and teaching.

I like many things about Sway, but above all I like how it formats my presentations to look so professional (especially since I have no real design skills!)

I'm including the link to Microsoft's getting started instructions but to be honest I would suggest opening the app and having a go.

Access Sway by opening Microsoft Office 365 home, click on the waffle icon on the top left, and select Sway.

Tell us how you Sway

Use the comments below to let us know how you have used Sway. We'd love to be able to share your examples!

It looks like there's a problem

IT LOOKS LIKE THERE'S A PROBLEM

A setting in your browser is blocking cookies. Please disable this setting or open in a new window. Learn more

Open in new window

Client Session ID 96932223-6421-440a-af3a-16b32b740a94